RENSAT

Documents required from France - inheritance goods

Eligible goods

The exemption applies to items that constitute the deceased's personal property:

which are intended to be used personally by the heir within the national territory
Which do not, by their nature and quantity, reflect any commercial concern. The importation can be carried out in one or several times within a period of two years from the date of taking possession of the goods (final settlement of the estate).

If the importation is carried out in several installments, an inventory listing all the goods for which the exemption is requested must be submitted to the customs service during the first importation. It must be annotated and endorsed at each import.

Exclusions

Are excluded from the franchise:

- alcoholic products
- tobacco products
- stocks of raw materials or semi-finished or finished products
- means of transport known as utility vehicles classified as such under tariff heading HS 87.04
- professional equipment other than portable tools for mechanical or liberal arts that were necessary for the exercise of the deceased's profession
- live livestock and stocks of agricultural products exceeding the quantities corresponding to a normal family supply

Formalities and procedures

To benefit from the exemption, the importer must present the following documents:

- proof of French residence (utility bill)
